Excerpt: . . . finally gained the great victory of Plassey in 1757, over the Indian allies of the French, which began the Empire of England in the east. While we cannot assert that the chief causes of these great events were the expedition of de Celoron, the building of this Old French Road, and the expedition of Coutrecoeur over Chautauqua Lake, they stand at the very beginning of a series of events that immediately preceded and led to these great results. By Mary A. Lathbury In the great rock-gardens of the west, Lying high upon the mountain breast, Where the thermal waters rise and fall, Rhythmic with earth--tides mystic call, Breathe the breath of waters toward the sun Till the cloud below--above--are one. There among the rocks a fountain springs From a fissure, and forever brings Treasure from the caverns, --silver, --gold, --Powdered by earths millstones huge and old; Brings deposit from its ancient bed Till the piled detritus cones have spread Straight across the valley. It must be That the waters ever seek the sea Near or far, as ever flame of fire Seeks the sun, the end of its desire. So the waters flowing day by day Build the bar, and shift their course alway; Now are falling westward, --now have gone Down the eastern slope to meet the dawn. Here and there a little pilgrim stream Joins them, widening the silver seam Through the cañon, calling up the grass Till it springs to meet...
