What was needed to work out that end was an intermediary, trusted alike by Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Chamberlain. Heaven, occasionally timeously bountiful in its gifts, provided Mr. Labouchere. I am fortunate in having been made the custodian of a vivid personal narrative of the events immediately preceding the motion for the second reading of the Home Rule Bill, written by the practised hand that up to a critical stage seemed to control them. Considerably within the limit of time mentioned, there was brought about a severance of the intimate relations formerly existing between two ultra-Radicals, which explains, and may serve to modify the effect of, any bitterness in the writer s references to his old familiar friend. Dating from Old Palace Yard, April 5, 1808, Mr. Labouchere writes: Dear Lucy.--This is for you when a hundred years hence you publish memoirs of these times. There were two negotiations with Joe. The first was this: Gladstone agreed to draw up two clauses, one letting the Irish il.P.s sit on Imperial matters, the other dealing with finance of an Imperial character. This was agreed to at Downing Street by him and his colleagues. I went to Joe. After some demur he agreed, and I went back to Downing Street, with the agreement written by me and dictated by him. Then I left London. The next day was Sunday. On my returning I found a man with a note from Joe. He said that he...
