ENGINEERING SOCIETIES BUILDING (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Engineering Societies Building During the past twenty years, the project has been frequently discussed and agitated of bring-ing together in one building, with proper facilities for offices, library, auditorium, meeting rooms, etc., the various engineering societies that make their headquarters in New York City. References to the idea may be found in various transactions and technical journals as far back as the early eighties, for even then the desirability of such accommodation had already become a topic of conversation among engineers. As a matter of fact, however, the process of society formation was then still quite active, and the tendencies were centrifugal; although with the creation of each new body, the difficulties as to headquarters increased very rapidly. The societies, old and new, all grew apace, acquired valuable property in books, furniture, relics, etc., but in general, had to content themselves with rental of small private houses or rooms therein, subject to loss by fire and to other grave inconveniences. In 1895, an actual plan for such a joint home was submitted to Mr. Andrew Carnegie by Mr. W. D. Weaver, a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, who received a reply of warm approval and commendation. Others are understood to have made suggestions later of the same nature. In February, 1903. Mr. Carnegie as one of the contributors to the library fund of that Institute, was invited to attend its Library Dinner, and after four declinations on account of inability to arrange a date, accepted. The dinner was given on February 9, at Sherry s, when Mr. Carnegie spoke on co-operation among engineers. The President of the Institute told of its growth...
